Surfing has fascinated filmmakers since Thomas Edison shot footage of Waikiki beachboys in 1906. Before the 1950s surf craze, surfing showed up in travelogues or as exotic background for studio features. The arrival of Gidget (1959) on the big screen swept the sport into popular culture, but surfer filmmakers were already featuring the day's best surfers in self-narrated two-reelers. Hollywood and independent filmmakers have produced about three dozen surf films in the last half century, including the frothy beach party movies Point Break (1991) and Chasing Mavericks (2012). From Bud Browne's earliest efforts to the Endless Summer (1966), Riding Giants (2004), and today's brilliant videos, over 1,000 surfing movies have celebrated the stoke. This first full-length study of surf movies gives critical attention to hundreds of the most important films.

Far Off Metal River examines how explorer Samuel Hearne's account of the alleged 1771 bloody falls massacre in the central Arctic has shaped ongoing colonization and economic exploitation of the north. As Emilie Cameron demonstrates, the Arctic has for centuries been treated like a blank page onto which a long line of explorers, missionaries, anthropologists, resource companies, and politicians have inscribed stories that serve their own interests. These stories have played a central role in shaping the region, including efforts to open the north to industrial resource extraction. Consequently, Qablunaat, non-Inuit, non-Indigenous people have a responsibility to question their relationships with the north and northerners, first by placing these stories within their proper historical, geographical, and social context, and then by developing new understandings and new relationships that reflect the actual political, cultural, economic, environmental, and social landscapes of the contemporary Arctic.

From the very infancy of the film industry, filmmakers have relied heavily upon literature as the foundation for their movie material. Well-known literary works such as Dickens's A Christmas Carol and Hawthorne's The Scarlet Letter were adapted to film in the silent era, as were such books as Thomas Dixon Jr.'s The Klansman, the basis for the film Birth of a Nation. In recent years, Nick Hornsby's About a Boy and Helen Fielding's Bridget Jones's Diary novels were the basis for popular movies bearing the same names.
